PLATFORM OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Adopted at the Convention in Chicago Last Week

TRIBUTE TO THE PARTY

Once more the republican party in national convention assembled submits its cause to the people. This great historic organization that destroyed slavery, preserved the union, restored credit, expanded the national domain, established a sound financial system, developed the industries and resources of the country and gave to the nation her seat of honor in the councils of the world now meets the new problems of the government with the same spirit with which it solved the old. In this the greatest era of American advancement the republican party has reached its highest service under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt. His administration is an epoch in American history. In no other period since the national sovereignty was won under Washington or preserved under Lincoln has there been such mighty progress in those ideals of government which make for justice, equality, and fair dealing among men. The highest aspirations of the American people have found voice. Their most exalted servant represents the best aims and the worthiest purposes of all his countrymen. American manhood has been lifted up to a nobler sense of duty and obligation. Conscience and courage in public station and high standards of right and wrong in private life have been the cardinal principles of political life. Capital and labor have been brought into closer relations of confidence and interdependence and the abuse of wealth and the tyranny of power, and all evils and privileged favoritism have been put to scorn by the simple and manly virtues of justice and fair play.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

The greatest accomplishments of President Roosevelt have been first and foremost brave and impartial enforcement of the law. The prosecution of illegal trusts and monopolies, the exposure and punishment of evil doers in the public service, the more effective regulation of the more extensive regulation of the rate and services of the great transportation lines, the complete overthrow of preferences, rebates, and discriminations, the arbitration of labor disputes, the amelioration of the conditions of wage earners everywhere, the conservation of the natural resources of the country, the forward step in the improvement of the inland waterways, and always the earnest support and defense of every wholesome safeguard which has made more secure the guaranties of life, liberty, and property, these are the elements that will make for Theodore Roosevelt his place in history, but more than all else the great things he has done will be an inspiration to those who have yet greater things to do.

We declare our unflinching adherence to the policies thus inaugurated, and pledge their continuance under the republican administration of the government.

COUNTRY'S GREAT PROSPERITY

Under the guidance of the republican principles the American people have become the richest nation in the world. Our wealth today exceeds that of England and all of her colonies and that of France and Germany combined. When the republican party was born the wealth of this country was $16,000,000,000. It has leaped to $110,000,000,000 in a generation, while Great Britain has gathered but $60,000,000,000 in 500 years. The United States now owns one-quarter of the world's wealth and makes one-third of all the modern manufactured products.

In the great necessities of civilization, such as coal, the motive power of all activity; iron, the chief basis of all industry; cotton, the staple foundation of all fabrics; wheat, corn and all the agricultural products that feed mankind, American supremacy is undisputed. And yet in the midst of democratic rule or the menace of it, might have equaled the familiar democratic panics of the past. We congratulate the people of the United States because of our American supremacy and hail with confidence the signs now manifest of complete restoration of business prosperity in all lines of trade, commerce, and manufacturing.

Since the election of William McKinley in 1896 the people of this country have felt anew the wisdom of trusting to the republican party through decisive majorities the control and direction of national affairs; the many wise and comprehensive measures adopted at recent sessions of congress have demonstrated the patriotic resolve of the republican leadership in the legislative department to keep step in the forward march to our better government.

the dust all laid by the previous night's rain and just clouds enough to keep the air cool fresh. The rich pine foliage and unequalled scenery along the route, the day and our errand made a blending of emotions rich, ennobling and long to be remembered.

Arriving at the grove, we were greeted by a large crowd of neighbors and friends of the deceased, who had gathered to witness the impressive ceremonies. Disembarking, all marched to the grave preceded by the Band playing subdued and appropriate music.

Council Commander Fred Pearce, assisted by Adviser M. A. Church, Clerk J. B. Pendergrass and other officers conducted the exercises. Dr. Chas. E. Davis delivered the address after which Photographer Gray and Rosser took pictures of the scene, then all repaired to the grove near by where the ladies of Shady Grove certainly exhibited the productions of their locality, their culinary skill, their splendid hospitality and general good

"WHEN THE WORLD GREW YOUNG"

A Story of a Maid, a Man and a Mine

CHAPTER XXII

At this juncture Pete came around the corner, his stolid face expressing no surprise at the dramatic situation. At Despard's command, he brought some water and Waldron was soon restored to consciousness. Rose went inside at her husband's pleading request, and sought to calm her excited state of mind. Waldron's arm was bleeding to an alarming extent, and Despard quickly cut the sleeve away and found the wounded member in a badly mangled state, the blood gushing in great jets. Pete brought him a clean handkerchief and this Despard knotted above the wound. Waldron watched with gleaming eyes, out of a white drawn face, but though he was writhing with pain he made no moan.

After Despard had assured himself that the bleeding had stopped he turned to Pete and said:

"Hitch up the light wagon, Pete and put the mattress and pillows on it, as you did for me when you took me to Eureka Springs. I want you to drive these men to Yellville." Then turning to Stovall speaking of Waldron:

"He will get to a physician quicker that way than any other. Now give him a drink from that flask."

Stovall, his keen, man of the world face, grown puzzled and grave, did as he was bid. Despard left them for a few minutes, and went into the house to comfort Rose, but when he heard the wagon at the front he hurried back and he and Stovall, with Pete's assistance, put the still, silent Waldron into the improvised ambulance. The wounded man was arranged as comfortable as possible under the circumstances, his arm elevated so that there would be no danger of a recurrence of the flow of blood.

Despard instructed Stovall how to tie the handkerchief in case it slipped, and then commanded Pete to drive on.

Then Waldron spoke:

"I suppose this is a 'heaping coals of fire' act. Well there is no use in thanking you, I don't think you'd believe it, and I doubt if I'd mean it. I'm glad the arm is tied up, but I'm sorry you had to do it."

"I think it best for you to say nothing," replied Despard with dignity and with a gesture to Pete who promptly pulled up his lines and drove away.

Despard went into the house and said cheerfully:

"He's all right, sweetheart. He won't die, but what a little tigress you are," and he kissed her teasingly in an effort to bring the color back to her pale face. After awhile, under the influence of his caresses and tender assurances of love, she became more like herself, but she was uneasy and restless until Pete's return the day following, with the news that Waldron's arm had been attended to by a local physician, and that he and Stovall had gone on to St. Louis. Rose was her-

WOODMEN UNVEILING AT SHADY GROVE CEMETERY

Crystal Camp No. 11

Of Eureka Springs, Ark., Unveil a Monument at Shady Grove Cemetery, and Returning via Odd Fellows Cemetery, Conduct Memorial Exercises and Decorate Graves of Deceased Woodmen

All In One Day

Eight thirty a. m., June 7th, 1908, was the hour set for its departure for Shady Grove Cemetery, to unveil a monument erected to the memory of Sov. Charles L. Rhoden.

Directed by Master of Ceremonies Burris and headed by its own band of 18 pieces, it marched from the hall to the Grand Central Hotel where a Tally Ho awaited the band, also carriages for the Camp and its friends, all forming a rather impressive procession which wound its way around East Mountain and out via the turnpike across Kings River and Osage River, thence south through the Cedar Woods to the Grove. The day was ideal, breeding in the quantity, quality and service of the beautiful spread there provided. It was a "happy hit" for a hungry crowd and rounded out our visit to a finish. We left with increased sympathy and respect from increasing acquaintance and Shady Grove has our best wishes for prosperity and happiness.

The exercises at Odd Fellow's Cemetery were according to form and conducted by the same officers as the unveiling.

By special request, Dr. Chas. E. Davis gave essentially the same address he gave one year ago at the same place on a similar occasion.

As to our Camp, while we are not doing extensive "wood hauling" just now, we are conscious that the leven of woodcraft is at work gradually solidifying us as a fraternal body and having a good influence on our entire community.

HAS Duncan "turned over?"

IF capacity to work, ability to achieve, success in every endeavor, thorough familiarity with the needs of the country, sterling honesty and sympathy with the laboring masses will count for anything, William H. Taft will go in with whoop.

HAVE you read the Republican platform? Its a document that commands the respect and admiration of all reasonable beings who can comprehend the achievements there detailed, and not feel a thrill of pride that the American people could make such progress in securing the rights of men, and all under the leadership of one party.

RECOUNTING the virtues of those who are dead and gone, while paying the annual tribute of decorating their graves with beautiful flowers, is one of the customs of a heroic people. One of the fraternal duties of that great society, the Woodmen of the World, is to keep forever green, not only the memory, but the grave of the departed brother. That Crystial Camp W. O. W. of Eureka Springs, Ark., performs this beautiful tribute, with dignity, pride and love is attested by their recent trip to Shady Groves and Odd Fellows Cemetery where the impressive ceremonies were performed.

JAMES SCHOOLCRAFT SHERMAN

WHO is he? Well for 20 years (since 1887) he has been a Congressman from Itica, N. Y., district for his party and had charge of the work of electing the Congressmen for his party in 1906. He is the vice presidential nominee of the Republican party. Is a walking encyclopedia of political facts. Is fully charged with republican dynamite. After March 4, 1909, he will preside over sessions of the United States Senate.

THE METHODIST HOSPITAL

THE Methodist Hospital, which is liable to crystalize out of the Sanitarium Hotel is an enterprise of far reaching importance to this city and this section of Arkansas. The business men and in fact all property owners and wage earners should take an active, earnest and financial interest in this most important matter. If the citizens of this community meet the modest demands of the promoters of this great movement, they will secure an enterprise which will have the solid, substantial, enthusiastic and lasting support of the whole Methodist conference of this State. Think of what that will mean to Eureka Springs. What advertising could be secured with thousands of dollars, that would carry with it the vitality, the continued, ceaseless, agitation for Eureka Springs as this denominational institution for the care of the sick and unfortunates of all creeds and no creeds. It is to be hoped that no one will turn the committee away empty handed when they call to ask help for this worthy movement.

THE CONVENTION

A GREAT party met in a great convention and reciting the records of its past achievements, made promise of its new purposes and nominated its leaders for the next four years.

To the careful, thoughtful man or woman who looked on the thousands of interested spectators, and the earnest, large brained men who assembled there to do the work laid out by eight million freemen, must have come a wholesome respect and confidence for the party, and the occasion that could call together such an assemblage.

Delegates from all states, territories and possessions of the Union were here. From Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands—the brightest minds—those interested in the great problems of life, brought about by the every varying changes due to the advance in science and invention and the new conditions resulting therefrom. All sincere, earnest, anxious to solve the problems that would hold out the greatest and most equitable chances for all mankind in the great battle of life. It was inspiring, ennobling, uplifting and helpful.

After attending such a convention one must have a greater pride, not only in his party, but his country as well. There were great governors, senators and congressmen and great men from the busy marts of trade and great manufacturers and great laborers all working together for a common aid—the selection of leaders for the greatest party known in the history of man. The platform was made and adopted, and then the next president and vice-president of the United States were nominated and their names are Taft and Sherman.

IT PAYS

WHETHER we know it or not, it pays to do right. Out of this basic fact, the truism of "honesty is the best policy" evolved. But the really good and great, whether the individual or the community, don't exactly like to have the cause of this action sifted down to a "policy" focus.

And yet most of the mainsprings of human action come into existence entirely from the standard of policy, or will it pay. One of the strongest arguments used by the saloon men and the wide open town is that "it pays," and the awful consequences in the way of shrinkage in all lines of business and depreciation of values where the saloon is voted out. One of the best object lessons, refuting this theory, is the following in regard to Atlanta, Georgia:

"The largest American city now living under a prohibitory law is Atlanta. Some interesting facts concerning the workings of the system in that place were given by Chief Jennings before the International Association of Chiefs of Police at Detroit on June 5. It appears, as might have been expected, that whisky shipped in from moister climes is still abundant. Serious crimes—thefts, burglaries, murders, and the like—have not materially diminished. But the police records show a marked improvement in the general good order of the town. In the first three months of 1907, under the open saloon, there were 2,666 arrests for disorderly conduct, due largely to whisky. In the corresponding three months of 1908 there were 1,637 arrests for the same offense, a decline of nearly 40 per cent. Arrests for drunkenness fell off from 1,293 to 328, or over 74 per cent, and arrests for idling and loitering from 236 to 164, or 30 per cent. The total number of arrests declined nearly 62 per cent, from 5,277 to 2,010.

"Chief Jennings added: We are also having less trouble in the red-light district. The women, under the law, are not allowed to furnish intoxicants by sale or otherwise; hence less drunkenness and disorder in these quarters."

"The results of five months' experience, as summarized by this apparently impartial witness, are no material change in serious crime, a great improvement in order, a great deal less drunkenness, more money spent for family supplies, and fewer complaints of distress for the want of the necessities of life. The last two items help to illuminate the theory that free liquor selling is good for business and that a dry town is a dead town."

This case and its consequences have attracted attention not only in Kentucky but in all the United States and some foreign countries. The circumstances are well known and it is generally held that Powers in particular has been the unfortunate victim of political persecution. He has been put on trial for his life four times and sentenced three times, twice to death. Many hundreds of thousands of signatures were on the petitions asking Gov. Willson to pardon him. Public opinion throughout the country and the press generally favored the pardon and praise Gov. Willson for his act. Powers and his partner are free men but the State can never repay them for the eight years of suffering it has inflicted on them, to gratify a violent partisan lust.—State Republican.

CALL AT THIS OFFICE

A Union of Hearts and Hands

Much to the surprise of the many friends, parents and relatives of both contracting parties, Miss Ruby Newport and Mr. Fred Cooper were married on Tuesday evening by the Rev. R. W. McCann, of the First Baptist church, at the pastor's home.

Mr. Fred Cooper is a member of the plumbing company of Cooper & Stewart and has a large circle of warm friends in this and his home town of Springfield, Mo.

Miss Ruby Newport is the charming and popular daughter of our townspeople, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Newport. She is always the same sweet, gentle, frank and light hearted young lady and has grown to womanhood in this city and justly counts her friends and admirers by the score.

All who have known these young people have been aware of a feeling deeper and stronger than mere friendship and that sooner or later they would take the step that would announce to all the world that they were one. But all the voices of nature were chanting matins and so without warning to parents or companions, a license was quickly secured, the ceremony performed and then a few steps over the hill and the bride's family were apprised and surprised, though all were willing to give their blessings and good wishes to the happy pair.

The bride and groom left on the next train for Springfield, Mo., to visit Mr. Cooper's parents and exhibit the dainty prize he has won in the matrimonial lottery of life.

They will remain away one week and then return to this city. In the meantime, in Miss Ruby's home it seems as though the clock had stopped, that daylight had gone, that the birds had ceased to sing, but with the return of the light step, the happy voice and smiling face, all will be well again and the world move on.

To these young people, their hosts of friends say their kindly words, and with them, the Times joins in all its heartiest and most enduring good wishes. To you Fred we say, you surely are to be congratulated, and to you, Ruby, we say, may all the joys of life attend you.

A committee was named to consider the appointment of sub-committees to go to Cincinnati to confer with Secretary Taft regarding the selection of a permanent chairman to manage his campaign.

The committee appointed a sub-committee of five, of which ex-Gov. Herrick was made chairman, to go to Cincinnati tomorrow and confer with Secretary Taft as to his wishes in the matter of the national chairmanship.

President Roosevelt Lauds Taft and Likens Nominee to Lincoln

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Washington, June 19.—Upon the nomination of Secretary Taft, President Roosevelt says:

"I feel that the country is indeed to be congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Taft.

"I do not believe there could be found in all the country a man so well fitted to be President. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the Nation's needs, without and within, and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens.

"He would be as emphatically a President of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to arouse or appeal to class hatred of any kind. He has a peculiar and intimate knowledge of any sympathy with the needs of all our people—of the farmer, of the wage worker, of the business man, of the property owner.

"No matter what a man's occupation or social position, no matter what his creed, his color or the section of country from which he comes, if he is an honest, hard working man who tries to do his duty toward his neighbor and toward the country, he can rest assured that he will have in Mr. Taft the most upright of representatives and the most fearless of champions."

cratic party minority in the house of representatives during the last session, many wholesome and progressive laws were enacted, and we especially commend the passage of the emergency currency bill, the appointment of a national monetary commission, the employers' government liability law, the measures for the greater efficiency of the army and the navy, the widows' pension bill, the child labor law for the district of Columbia, the new statute for the safety of the railroad engineers and firemen, and many other acts conserving the public welfare.

TARIFF REVISION PROMISED

The republican party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of the congress immediately following the inauguration of the next president, and commends the steps already taken to this end in the work assigned to the appropriate committees of congress, which are now investigating the operation and effect of these schedules. In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries. We favor the establishment of a maximum and minimum rate to be administered by the president under limitations fixed by the law, the maximum to be available to meet the discrimination by foreign countries against American goods entering our markets, and the minimum representing the normal measure of protection at home, the aim and the purpose of republican policy being not only to preserve without excessive duties the security against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage workers of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF

Between the United States and the Philippines we believe in a free interchange of products with such limitations as to sugar and tobacco as will afford adequate protection to domestic interests.

CURRENCY

We approve the emergency measure adopted by the government during the recent financial disturbance and especially commend the passage by congress of the law designed to protect the country from a repetition of such a stringency. The republican party is committed to the development of a permanent currency system, responding to our greater needs and the appointment of a national monetary commission by the present congress which will impartially investigate all the proposed methods and insure the early realization of this purpose.

The present currency laws have fully justified their adoption, but an expanding commerce, a marvelous growth in wealth and population, multiplying the centers of distribution increasing the demand for the movement of crops in the west and south, and entailing periodic changes in the monetary condition, disclose the need of a more elastic and adaptable system. Such a system must meet the requirements of agriculturists, manufacturers, merchants and business men in general, must be automatic in operation, minimizing the fluctuations in the interest rates, and all must be in harmony with the republican doctrine which insists that every dollar shall be based upon and as good as gold.

POSTAL SAVINGS

We favor the establishment of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift.

TRUSTS

The republican party passed the Sherman anti-trust law over democratic opposition, and enforced it after democratic dereliction. It has been a wholesome instrument for good in the hands of a wise and fearless administration; but experience has shown that its effectiveness can be strengthened and its real objects better obtained by such amendment as will give the federal government greater supervision and control over and greater publicity in the management of that class of corporations engaged in interstate commerce having power and opportunity to effect monopolies.

RAILROADS

We approve the enactment of the railroad rate law and the vigorous enforcement by the present administration of the statute against rebates and discrimination, as a result of which the advantages formerly possessed by the large shipper over the small shipper have substantially disappeared. And in this connection we commend an appropriation by the present congress to enable the interstate commerce commission to thoroughly investigate and give publicity to the accounts of interstate railroads. We believe, however, that the interstate commerce law should be further amended so as to give railroads the right to make and publish traffic agreements subject to the approval of the commission, but maintaining always the principle of competition between naturally competing lines and avoiding the common control of such lines by any means whatsoever.

We favor such national legislation and supervision as will prevent the overissue of stocks and bonds in the future by interstate carriers.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY

The enactment in constitutional form at the present session of congress of the employers' liability law, the passage and enforcement of the safety appliance statute, as well as the additional safety secured for engineers and firemen, the reduction in the hours of labor of trainmen and railroad telegraphers, the successful exercise of the powers of mediation and arbitration between the interest of railroads and their employees, and the law making a beginning in the policy of compensation for injured employees of the government, were the most commendable accomplishments of the present administration. But there is further work in this direction yet to be done, and the republican party pledges its continued devotion to every cause that makes for the safety and the betterment of conditions among those whose labor contributes so much to the progress and welfare of the country.

HELP TO WORKERS

The wise policy which has induced the republican party to maintain protection to American labor, to establish the eight hour day in the construction of all public work, to increase the list of employees who shall have preferred claims for wages under the bankruptcy law, to adopt a child labor statute for the District of Columbia, to direct the investigation into the condition of the working women and children, and later of the employees of telephone and telegraph companies engaged in interstate business, to appropriate $150,000 at the recent session of congress in order to secure a thorough inquiry into the causes of loss of life in the mines, and to amend and strengthen the law prohibiting the importation of contract labor will be pursued in every legitimate direction in federal authority to lighten the burdens and increase the opportunity of happiness and the advancement of all who toil.

The republican party recognizes the special needs of wage earners generally for their well being and the well being of all.

COURT INJUNCTIONS

The republican party will uphold at all times the authority and the integrity of the courts, state and federal, and will ever insist that their power to enforce their process and to protect life, liberty and property shall be preserved inviolate.

We believe, however, that the rules of procedure in the federal courts with respect to the issuance of the writ of injunction should be more accurately defined by statute, and that no injunction or temporary restraining order should be issued without notice except where irreparable injury would result from delay, in which case a speedy hearing should be granted thereafter.

self again after that, but she could scarcely bear Despard out of her sight for a long time and as this state of affairs was not objected to at all by her husband, they were together more than ever.

And so the months wore on, each bringing its full quota of work and duties. Just after the holidays, Despard and Pete with the assistance of a neighbor, added another room to the bungalow, which contributed a great deal to the comfort and privacy of their every day life, for they made a bed room of it and used the one they had been occupying for a living room.

The spring with its busy days, arrived, and for the first time Rose grew a little lonely. She could not be so much with Despard, for he had the roughest of work to do, and it took a good deal of her time for her household duties, now, that Pete was so busy. But she interested herself in the flowers and that, with her sewing, kept her mind employed to a great extent. But it was with a great deal of pleasure that she responded to Despard's offer to accompany him to Eureka Springs for a fortnight's vacation. He had seen her grow a little thoughtful and he was wise enough to know that even the most devoted of wives require the companionship, occasionally of their own sex. They went to the Thach hotel and at the end of a few days, he proposed leaving her while he went back to the farm, but at this she demurred so much, that they finally compromised on a week's stay, and both went back together.

During the summer, Despard sent for a cousin of his mother's a lady of middle age who was making her home with two married nieces, and Rose was so happy that she cried, when the kind faced little woman came back from Yellville with Pete.

Mrs. Wainwright staid till Autumn and then she took Rose back with her to Eureka Springs and in about ten days Despard followed.

And there in the Hotel Dieu, one morning in September, a tiny girl baby was born that Despard promptly christened Rosebud.

"You see dear, she's going to be just like you, even to her red hair," said Despard teasingly.

"I havn't red hair, have I Cousin Wainwright," demanded Rose indignantly.

"Don't, tell me," said Despard slangily, but Rose knew he thought she had the most beautiful hair in the world, so she looked into his smiling eyes with a laugh on her lips and let him have his way.

A son may be his father's pride, but nothing in life, not even his wife, ever comes so close to a man's heart as a baby daughter, and so it was with a mixture of awe and tenderest adoration that Despard would hold his child in his arms, and meet with almost startled shame, the scrutiny of wise, wondering baby eyes that came from the vast unknown to search out the still, small places of his soul. And more keenly than ever, there came to his sensitive perception, the exaltation of motherhood. How this supreme act of creation, made all else in the world's field of activity seem small and of no moment. Somehow, face to face, with this great stupendous force of Nature all that man had accomplished, or might achieve, seemed inferior and commonplace by the side of the mother and the child. And then he realized how God himself had honored this above all human relations, and the church had for two thousand years made it the pivotal illuminating tenet of its creed.

Something like this he said to Rose one evening as he sat by her couch, with ever and anon a look at the tiny rosy baby face with its halo of red gold hair. Rose smiled serenely.

"All women feel that dearest whether they say it or not. I'm sure I feel just as Eve did, when she held her first born in her arms, 'when the world was young.' Age nor custom cannot dim the sacred lustre that hovers over the birth of a human soul. Dearest when are we going back to Eden?"
